CO4

I am one of those people who love the desert. It brings peace to my mind after the daily battle for one's bread. When tired of fighting, the green countryside never lets me forget my worries; everywhere I see flowers, trees, birds and insects struggling restlessly before my eyes, each striving desperately to win even if his own life is the death of another. In the desert, however, the sun is the master; all else retires before its scorching rays. Only where there is water does the earth of the desert give a rich home to trees and flowers; but one has to go a long way to find water in a desert, otherwise, it would not be a desert so those who love the peace of a treeless and grassless place can stand on the top of a rocky hill and see nothing around them but the sun baked desert. With no signs of effort or passion to disturb them, they then strengthened in spirit, with rested nerves and a peaceful mind. They can return to the battle for existence in the towns.

(a) Why does green countryside not allow the writer to forget his worries? (1)

(b) Explain briefly what you understand by the following two phrases given below: (2)

(i) The daily battle for one's bread

(ii) Its own life is the death of another.
